AT THE SUNSET

*With ticket to return tomorrow
I was dragging myself along the alley.
The sun was hidden behind the sea.
And the alley was deserted.*

*And suddenly it seemed to me,
In the world I remained only one -
And I'm going to sea disappear ...
And with fear I slowed my pace.*

*Yet I came to the sea,
Mirroring the Black Sea,
And I swam not long -
Until it was dark.*

*I didn't know that the coast deserted because people maid off before:
because some evil shark
Came to have a snack with the people.*

Nymph and Satyr

*Once an old satyr near a clean lake
Saw a beautiful nymph.
The nymph stood naked.
The creek was washing marvelous body*

*Muffled cough, disgusting satyr
Instantly froze like a stone.
What's this? As if the Past was not,
There was no sun, Earth and Heaven.*

*There was The Moment of Revelation,
The mysterious powers of Beauty.
The Satyr mind faded. From his breast
Was uprooted hoarse, painful groan.*

Nymph heard this plaintive moan,
And smiled and said: - Go away,
Muck Seeing you really can not bear.
Get out, unhappy, in a fun forest.

Listen a happy birds singing,
Pluck from branches ripe berries,
Eat mushroom russula with pleasure
And the ripe fruit do not forget.

I'll find a handsome young fellow.
I'll give myself to him without shame,
Nymph cannot ever grow old,
Forever I'm friends with love, old man.

You, after eating, You take a nap!
In a dream can you see me again -
And with a passion to master me!
And awakened, You'll thank the Heavens.
